

Increase your footprint with social media sharing

To successfully communicate with your community, it's important to share information in ways that people will see it. While texts, phone calls, and emails are still critical for direct outreach, students and families today are spending more time than ever on social media—and relying on it to get news and updates.

With Remind Hub, you can make sure your announcements reach your community in multiple ways, including Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter. Once you connect your organization's social media accounts, all you need to do is choose where you'd like to share each announcement. A delivery summary will confirm what's been sent and seen.

Use social media sharing to:

- ★ Broadcast announcements
Cross-posting to Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter means that your messages have a higher chance of being seen—and getting more engagement.
- ★ Celebrate achievements
Amplify achievements and build a positive school culture. When your team wins a big game or your athletes bring home a trophy, share your students' achievements with the rest of your community.

- ★ Engage your local community
District and school communities extend beyond students and their families. Social media can help raise awareness in your community about volunteer opportunities, fundraisers, and other important events.

Social media cross-posting is available through Remind Hub.

Learn more at www.remind.com/hub

